

Media Contact:
Mary Ann Petrilena
maryann@betterschoolfood.org
(914) 671-1393

For Immediate Release

Opportunity for Congress to Address Childhood Obesity and Improve School Food

“Two Angry Moms”* Film Tells Story of Better School Food; Inspires Parents to Take Action Toward Improving School Food

-- Honored Guests Jayni and Chevy Chase to Attend Screening at U.S. Capitol HC-8 --

Washington, D.C. –Tuesday, September 23, 2007 – Today at 2:00 p.m. Better School Food, a nonprofit organization dedicated to improving school food for a positive impact on children’s health, behavior and learning, will present a screening of “Two Angry Moms,” which was produced by award-winning documentary filmmaker Amy Kalafa in conjunction with BSF founder, dentist and nutritionist Dr. Susan Rubin. The film explores the roles the federal government, corporate interest, school administration and parents play in the feeding of America’s children.

“This is a critical opportunity for us to reach our lawmakers and show that now is the time to make change, with the Farm Bill up for renewal,” says Dr. Rubin. “There is much work to be done in school districts nationwide; we hope to facilitate those changes, and inspire others to get involved, through this screening, and through the work of our organization.”

For more information on BSF and Two Angry Moms, visit www.betterschoolfood.org or contact BSF President, Mary Ann Petrilena at maryann@betterschoolfood.org.

About Better School Food

Founded in 2005, Better School Food (BSF) is a nonprofit organization dedicated to improving school food for a positive impact on children’s health, behavior and learning. BSF founder Susan Rubin, DMD, HHC, is a dentist, holistic nutritionist and parent of three who has been advocating better school food for a decade. BSF aims to provide resources and guidance to parents who are inspired to take action after seeing the film Two Angry Moms, created by award-winning documentary filmmaker and Yale University Department of Medicine and Psychiatry Lecturer Amy Kalafa, HHC. For more information, visit www.betterschoolfood.org.

###