Two Angry Moms Fighting for the Health of America's Children

Timely, controversial and cutting edge, Two Angry Moms, the film and the movement, address an issue of great concern to parents across the country. What is happening to the health of our children and how does school food factor in?

Selected clips from the film, Two Angry Moms, will be screened in Mill Valley, CA, on May 22nd. The film chronicles what happens when two fed-up moms take on the system and start a grass-roots revolution aimed at establishing programs that safeguard the health of our kids.

Moms Amy Kalafa (filmmaker) and Dr. Susan Rubin (founder, Better School Food) explore the roles the federal government, corporate interest, school administration and parents play in the feeding of our country's school kids and the impact it has on their health. Amy, Susan and Renegade Lunch Lady, Ann Cooper will all be available for conversation on May 22nd following the screening.

Two Angry Moms, is a growing movement that has touched parents across the country. For more details about the movie and the movement please visit <http://www.angrymoms.org>, or contact us at:
